

Catherine Li is a senior credit risk executive at Bank of America with 15 years of experience in banking industry focusing on credit and market risk analysis and management, financial risk integration and portfolio management. She is currently heading the Counterparty Credit Risk Reporting and Analytics team that has a global presence to support the company's worldwide derivatives trading and security lending business. Catherine was a graduate from UNCC in 2000 with Master degree in Computer Science. She is an active player in bank's mentoring program to provide guidance and help to junior associates.