

Keith A. Heyen

Keith has taught in the economics departments at the University of California – Santa Cruz, Hunter College and City University of New York Graduate School and the finance department at Fordham University Graduate School of Business. After leaving academics he briefly worked in the Capital Markets Group at Deloitte & Touche and in a financial products group, CNA Guaranty & Credit in New York, writing financial guarantees on credit default swap and firm structured transactions. He has been with Wachovia and Wells Fargo Bank since 2002 where he is now a managing director in the Market Risk Analytics group. He manages risk treatment development and implementation for Basel 2.5 capital and CCAR stress testing.

Keith has a Ph.D. in econometrics from the University of Wisconsin – Madison.